

53' trailer

The standard length of the trailer for shipping freight by truck; 53 feet was chosen as part the Surface Transportation Assistance Act, which authorized trailers 53 feet long to be operated on the national network of highways, and encouraged states to allow them on all roads. This improved the cargo capacity – or payload – from the then-current standard of 40 feet.