

mags

short for magnetometer, which is an electronic device used at each entry point to a venue to detect metal objects as part of the overall security screening procedures. Mags are normally used for high security events, such as those at the White House. Most festivals employ the pat-down or wand procedure for checking against contraband.