

RFID

Radio-Frequency Identification (RFID) is the use of radio waves to read and capture information stored inside a badge or wristband at events and festivals. This can, for example, let an RFID sensor at the front gates know whether your credential is valid, and what type of access you get (general admission, VIP, all-access, etc).