

white noise

white noise is equal energy per frequency; pink noise is equal energy per octave. The white noise spectrum has equal power within any equal interval of frequencies. However, humans do not perceive noise this way so pink noise is used as a reference signal for audio applications.